Dear Sir:

The church of which I am a member is planning to build a new building, and I am interested in various plans that might be of benefit, especially with regard to the outward appearance of the building.

Your fine book THE CHURCH OF TOMORROW has come to my attention, and to augment the information found there I wonder if you have available pictures of various style structures. It should be mentioned that our plans must be limited to a modest sum, say about $35,000.

The type building I would particularly like to have information about is possibly best described as the old English style with steep sloping roof, one story, using a dark colored brick or stone. I trust this will convey in a crude way what is in mind.

It would be deeply appreciated if you can be of any assistance, either by comment or by outside views of building types.

Respectfully,

M. I. Summerlin
