

Monday
Sept 29, 1934

The first meeting of the architectural Society of the Rice Institute for the year 1934-35 was called to order by the new President Nolan Claude Davis.

Other officers installed at this time were - Vice President - Seth Lowie Morris; Treasurer - James Thomas; and Secretary - Mary D. Hensley.

Discussion was immediately opened for plans on the forthcoming architectural Ball. The ideas presented by various members were as follows - Chinese - Moorish - Persian - Mid England and Viking. Members were asked to consider these until the following meeting when they will be asked to present sketches showing likely schemes.

The subject of pledging and initiation was brought up by Mr. Morris. The sophomore class to be pledged and initiated immediately with those of the junior class. An opportunity will be given those to pledge who did not take advantage of the opportunity last year. Henceforth the Freshman class is to be pledged at end of the year a list of eligible students to be posted in order to select new pledges by next meeting.

The condition of the treasury was discussed favorably.

Plans for a picnic to be held in the near future were disclosed - at this happy prospect there was a motion to adjourn.
