Dr. Nicholas Nyaradi, Director of the Institute of International Studies at Bradley University and former Minister of Finance of Hungary, will speak before the Forum in the Fondren Lecture Lounge, on March 11, at 7:15 p.m.

His topic, "Behind the Iron Curtain and the Meaning of Khruschev's Visit," is one with which he is intimately familiar.

Born In Hungary

He was born and educated in Hungary, although he is now an American citizen; he was a member of the Budapest Bar Association for 13 years; for a number of years he served as the legal advisor and executive director of one of the largest banks in Hungary; and after the war, during which he served in the anti-Nazi underground, he took a post in the anti-Communist coalition government.

Then in 1948, under mounting Communist pressure, he and his wife fled the country and came to the United States.

Book Acclaimed

His book: My Ringside Seat In Moscow has been acclaimed by leading interviewers as one of the best books ever published on Russia, and several of his articles have been inserted into the Congressional Record.

In addition he has earned a reputation as a dynamically interesting speaker and lecturer in his visits to other colleges and universities around the country.

He is here in Houston on invitation of the Texas Manufacturers Association to address the annual convention of the Houston chapter.

A question and answer program will follow his address.
