Senate Delays Action On By-Laws; Campanile Favorites To Be Elected

The Senate acted Tuesday night to allow the student body to elect future Campanile Beauties.

Acting on the advice of Terry Cloudman, Campanile Editor, the Senate scrapped the old plan by which the five Beauties were chosen by celebrities or other non-university judges. In keeping with the new democratic process, the position will now be called 'Campanile Favorite.'

The five Favorites will be elected from a slate of thirty candidates who will be selected by the Senate and three cabinet members from each college. Girls can not be chosen Favorites twice in succession under the new rules.

Check Finances

Jim Treybig, Business Manager of last year's Campanile, presented the final financial statement for the 1963-64 yearbook.

The Senate, following up its letter of last week to President K. S. Pitzer, formally appointed the old and new college and SA presidents to a committee which will investigate disciplinary procedures and University regulations.

Because final wording of the by-laws which were to be voted on at this meeting was completed only shortly before the meeting, it was decided to discuss the changes this week and vote on them at the next meeting in two weeks.

Proposed changes include a maximum salary of $900 to the editor and business manager of the Thresher. Their salary would be drawn from the profits after ten percent of the profits had been paid to the staff.

Another amendment would make the editor responsible for the Thresher's editorial policy. The business manager would be responsible for financial policy. If the business manager has any complaints he may take them to the Senate Financial Committee.

The Financial Committee would be created by another by-law and would consist of the SA president and treasurer, two senators and a Business Administration student.

It would act as advisor to the Senate and see that the financial by-laws are adhered to by the dependent organizations.

The Senate also seeks to increase its control of Student Center Board and Forum Committee finances and to change the date of the all-school election to "between March 15 and April 15."

It was also suggested that the chairman of the Forum be made an elective post. A by-law proposal supporting this change can be expected at the next meeting.
