Austrian Envoy Speaks At Rice On Cold War

By PHIL GARON

Dr. Bruno Kreisky, Foreign Minister of Austria, will deliver a special lecture at Rice University on Tuesday, October 19, President Kenneth S. Pitzer announced last Friday.

"Is the Cold War in Europe Over?" will be the subject of Minister Kreisky's lecture, which will be given in Hamman Hall auditorium at 8 pm. The lecture will be open to the public.

Personal Party

Minister Kreisky's party is due to arrive in Houston Tuesday afternoon. With him will be his personal aide Dr. Ellingsen; Dr. Carleton Smith, President of the National Arts Foundation; and Minister Dr. Hans Tahlberg, Chief of Information and Documentation for the Austrian Foreign Ministry. Plans include a welcome at the airport by Mayor Louie Welch and a press conference.

Academic Interests

Dr. Kreisky is widely known as a student of history and literature, as well as a diplomat. To promote science and arts he initiated the Korner foundation, named in the honor of the late President of Austria.

In 1963, following his visit to the late President John F. Kennedy, he lectured at Harvard, California, and Indiana Universities.

Prior to his address at Rice Minister Kreisky will address the United Nation Assembly. He will also present Austria's highest award to former President Dwight D. Eisenhower. This is in recognition of his efforts on Austria's behalf during the post World War II struggle for full sovereignty and independence.
