Intramurals Rules Set: All Students May Play

By JOHN DURHAM

The Department of Health and Physical Education at Rice conducts a program of intramurals for those students who wish to take part in competitive sports.

There is an intramural tournament in progress during the entire school year. The teams, both men's and women's, are organized by the students themselves. An entry fee of fifty cents is required for each player, but twenty-five of this is returned if no games are forfeited.

IN ORDER to be able to participate in a college or class tournament, a player must have been a member of a regular intramural team in that same sport.

Anyone who is a member of a varsity or freshman team or has earned a letter in a sport is ineligible to compete in that particular intramural sport.

All other students and faculty of Rice are eligible for membership on intramural teams.

ALL TEAMS are limited to two players who are receiving or have received at any time athletic scholarship aid from Rice. There are several leagues formed in each sport so that players can avoid conflicts with labs and tutorials. Freshmen are eligible to participate in the regular leagues or in special freshman leagues.

Prospective football teams should know that there has been a major rules change this year: all kick-offs have been eliminated. The winner of the toss at the beginning of the game will be given the ball on its own twenty-yard line. Also after a team has scored a touchdown, the opposing team will take possession of the ball on its own twenty-yard line.
