

Club Presidents Asked To Revise Constitutions Now

Organization presidents should read Article C Section I of the Student Association By-Laws and bring their constitutions up to date to abide by the new Student Association Constitution. These requirements for organization constitutions are listed in the constitution as follows:

(1) The name and purpose of the organization.

(2) The definition of membership of the organization.

(3) The definition of officers of the organization and their method of selection.

(4) The statement of who has the authority to spend money belonging to the organization.

(5) The method of amendment.

The organization must comply to the new constitution in the next two months, or it may be subject to abolishment; to have revoked the privilege of being covered in the Campanile; to have its activities not listed on the student social calendar; no reservation and use of meeting place on campus, in accordance with Administration rules; and no use of the name of the Rice Institute of official connection with the organization.