

Garrett Edits 'Engineer'; First Appearance Due

The Rice Engineer will make its first appearance for the year this month. A student publication, the magazine is written and edited by engineering students with a faculty advisory board.

Scientific Articles

Not strictly an engineering magazine, The Rice Engineer contains different kinds of scientific articles by students in addition to news about campus activities of the engineering societies.

This issue will contain an article by Bruce Gilmer on technical education in the Soviet Union and a profile on the new Dean of Engineering, Dr. Griffiths.

Editor Speaks

Editor Ed Garrett says, "The magazine offers good practice for technical writing. It represents the school and the writers to industry and anyone interested in hiring graduates, and it is an excellent showplace for engineering and scientific writing."

Anyone interested in contributing articles to the magazine man contact Walter Moore at Jackson 9-2033 or another member of the staff.
