‘University Studies’ Succeeds Pamphlet

By ALBERT LOWEY-BALL

The Rice University Studies is the title given to a new Rice publication which has come out this year.

The new magazine is a successor to The Rice Pamphlet, a publication which the Institute began in 1912 as a quarterly journal devoted to scholarly studies. Gradually the publication of the pamphlet became more and more irregular, and it eventually changed into a kind of service magazine and bulletin for the administration.

THIS YEAR, the title and format of the publication were radically changed, and once again its main line is scholarly and scientific research. Three numbers of the new publication,
