FROM FROSH TO PROFS

Quotes, Quips for Curious Collegiates Collected

By CLAIRE PLUNGUIAN

It seems that students of a certain French class were quite delighted to find that the Co-op had mistakenly ordered one of their texts in English, less delighted when the professor announced that they would read this book, when the French edition arrived “in French — in class.”

* * *

When asked why they were wandering around a dormitory hall rattling and banging weird instruments and making a lot of noise, a group of freshmen girls replied, “Well, we didn’t have anything else to do. . .”

* * *

Observed in the soggy, soggy dew last week: a freshman on his way to class, clutching his beanie and muttering, “But this rain’s going to shrink my beanie.”

* * *

Noticed last week:

Thriving and noisy colonies of frogs all over campus.

115 freshman girls not sitting in the lounge.