

Interviews Use Undergraduates For Trial Period

A group of students, many with experience in college guidance activities, have begun a program designed to test the value of student participation in the university's admissions procedures.

THE STUDENTS, either singly or in pairs, are being given an opportunity to sit in on all interviews held by Mr. James B. Giles, Director of Admissions. They will examine the prospective student's record, ask questions of him, and submit an evaluation.

The student evaluations will go with the applicant's file when it is submitted to the judgment of the admissions committee. Student participation will continue for a trial period of about three weeks and will be used only in those interviews conducted personally by the Director of Admissions.
