

Damage Not Great From Carla's Hand

Widespread damage littered the Rice campus in the wake of Hurricane Carla, but a spokesman for the Department of Buildings and Grounds expressed relief that destruction was not considerably greater.

Twelve imported Italian cypress trees near Lovett Hall were uprooted; six have been staked up and may be saved, while the others must be replaced. A few trees in other scattered locations on campus were blown over. Broken limbs and branches numbered in the hundreds.

ALL BUILDINGS suffered some degree of water damage, with the Library hardest hit. Around-the-clock work by janitorial crews kept damage to furnishings in the Lecture Lounge at a minimum.

Gutters and tiles were ripped off by 80-mile-an-hour winds around the men's colleges. A large area of the Field House roof was damaged. At the stadium, several of the giant lights were knocked out of focus, but they should be repaired in time for the Blue-Gray game tomorrow night.
