PREFACE

I SHOULD like to thank the Rice Institute and its president, Dr. William V. Houston, for the kind invitation to present these lectures.

Acknowledgement is due to the Oxford University Press, and the Royal Institute of International Affairs, in London, for permission to use the quotation in the first lecture, which appears at the bottom of Page 19 in Volume V of A History of the Peace Conference of Paris, edited by H. W. V. Temperley.

Acknowledgement is due to the New York Times and Mr. Gerald W. Johnson for their permission to use the quotation in the second lecture from Mr. Johnson's article, "It Is Not Because We Have No Leaders," which appeared in the New York Times Magazine of November 10, 1946.

I am indebted to Kathryn Gorman for assistance in checking a large number of speeches and other statements on American foreign policy, to Pauline Cash for assistance in preparation of the manuscript, and to my wife for innumerable suggestions and unfailing encouragement.

It hardly needs be stated that the opinions and conclusions, particularly on American foreign policy, are solely my own.
