FOOTBALL PROSPECTS MOST BRILLIANT IN RICE'S HISTORY

MANY VETERANS OF GRIDIRON AND SERVICE ARE RETURNING

Arbuckle has Great Combination of Letter Men and New Material for Championship Machine.

Little Ed Rice thinks that his side of 1919 will be the greatest of all his teams. The old, ardent five that brought so many victories in 1918 is back in uniform, and all will be ready to go as the season begins.

The most important addition to the team is the return of Little Ed Rice, the famous gridiron star. His presence will add greatly to the team's chances of success.

The team will be bolstered by the return of several veterans of the 1918 team, including Willard, Morgan, and Johnson. These players will provide experienced leadership and a solid foundation for the team.

The team will also benefit from the addition of several new players, including Green, White, and Brown. These players will bring fresh blood to the team and add to its overall depth.

The team's success will depend on the performance of its key players, including Ed Rice, Willard, and Morgan. If they perform well, the team will have a good chance of winning the championship.

The team will face stiff competition from other teams in the league, including William and Mary, Virginia, and Harvard. However, with the addition of Rice and the return of the veterans, the team should be able to compete at a high level.

The team's season will begin on October 1, when they play their first game against William and Mary. The team will then have a tough road ahead, facing teams like Virginia and Harvard.

If the team performs well, they could be headed for a conference championship. However, if they falter, they could face a difficult season. Either way, it promises to be an exciting season of football at Rice.

MANY VETERANS OF GRIDIRON AND SERVICE ARE RETURNING
The first autumnal event of the new academic year will be the get-acquainted meeting on the lawn of the Commons, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. Saturday afternoon. Committees of both organizations have been working out plans for a good time.

There's no doorway that has been secured to furnish the music and simple refreshments have been provided for. Committee members and students from the various groups have advertised to themselves that it is not to be a "reception," for their number only—but a get-together opportunity for every member of the faculty and student body of the Institute. New students are especially requested to be present and share in what promises to be a most enjoyable affair. Saturday in the Commons—a tie 4 p.m.

The Commencement of 1919 was one of the most remarkable occasions since the opening of the Rice Institute.

In 1916 the first Commencement was held in a small tent, but in 1919, as we were then a Freshman, it was more notable. In 1917 the United States had entered the World War, and in 1918 there was a terrible influenza epidemic that killed many people. But in 1919, the Freshman were making our people his people, and he sought principles for the resolution of the social backgrounds of his generation. He was seeking a well thought out program; he had organized the college and the city. Four years before, he had won the respect of his colleagues, the affection of his students, and the confidence of the faculty and the community. He was working to a carefully planned program, and he had achieved his ends.

In May, 1919, the war was over and the nation was at peace. The Freshman were making their people his people, and they were seeking principles for the resolution of the social backgrounds of their generation. They were seeking a well thought out program; they had organized the college and the city. Four years before, they had won the respect of their colleagues, the affection of their students, and the confidence of the faculty and the community. They were working to a carefully planned program, and they had achieved their ends.

On the last day of the Commencement, the Freshman were making their people his people, and they were seeking principles for the resolution of the social backgrounds of their generation. They were seeking a well thought out program; they had organized the college and the city. Four years before, they had won the respect of their colleagues, the affection of their students, and the confidence of the faculty and the community. They were working to a carefully planned program, and they had achieved their ends.
