The THESSHER 11: HOUSTON, TEXAS

SOCIETY

Dr. RobertAspar has returned to Texas Committee after a visit to New Orleans.

Henry Fisher, former Rice student, and his wife, Mrs. Fisher, returned home from their recent trip to New Orleans.

Miss Marie Louisa Haggard, a student in the Christian College, has been elected to the Student Council.

"FOOD FOR THE HELPLESS" (Continued from Page 1)

The problem of combining food elements brought it home to the author that what his paper needed most of all was variety. Here is the point at which Adderley and Stendhal meet, when they let them drift and sink at the same casual depths, when the students live in the house, but not in the house. They then created a family of influential readers, who sustained this opinion and kept the bell ringing.

"Variation of Different Kind"

The students of the Spectator's club discovered that they must start writing formal essays. He remains, after all, a writer of the Spectator type. The old age of Johnson is the age of Johnson. He has the same vivid authenticity.

"Character Beyond Control"
Texas A. & M. had their hands full in the second game. The Aggies were not merely a good team. They were a great team. Gordon Keen, the new star, was a force to be reckoned with. He knocked the Rice guards out of bounds with his speed and agility. He scored early and often, and his presence on the court was felt by everyone who played against him. The Rice guards, led by McCain, did their best to check Keen, but he was too much for them. His speed and quickness made him a difficult player to defend. He scored 18 points in the first half alone, and the game was over before it even started.

The Owls, on the other hand, were playing well. They were led by Darby and Brien, who scored 14 and 12 points respectively. However, their defense was not up to the standards they usually set. They allowed Keen to score at will, and he made them pay for it.

The Owls went into the locker room at halftime trailing 17-11. They came out determined to make a comeback, but their efforts were in vain. The Aggies were too strong, and they won the game 49-34.

After the game, the Owl coaches and players were disappointed. They had expected to win, but Keen was too much for them. They would have to work harder in the future to match the Aggies' speed and skill.

The next game was scheduled for the following week, and the Owls were determined to bounce back. They knew that they could not afford to have another poor performance against A. & M. They needed to improve their defense and tighten up their offense. They had a long road ahead of them, and they were ready to face any challenge that came their way.
