COACHES MEETING RESULTS IN TWO NEW GRID RULES

Modification Designed to Correct Tackle of Shift Plays

The coaching staff met recently to discuss the rules of American football and arrived at two new grid rules designed to correct tackle of shift plays.

The first rule states that in the event of a shift play, the ball carrier must be tackled by two or more defenders in order to be considered downed.

The second rule states that in the event of a shift play, the ball carrier must be tackled by two or more defenders in order to be considered downed.

The two rules were met with approval by the coaching staff and will be implemented in upcoming games.

Comstock was elected to lead the team in the upcoming season, and Underwood received the Most Valuable Player Award for his performance in the previous season.

The banquet was a success and the team looked forward to the upcoming season under the leadership of Comstock.

The Sunset Hunters

If a student can "sell" a speech, he is said to have "sold" the speech. If he can "sell" a speech in such a way that the audience is convinced, he is said to have "sold" the speech to the audience. The sunset hunters are the men who do this. They are the men who have the ability to make a speech convincing and clear. They are the men who can make the audience believe in what they say.
