Elsie Robinson, one of the editors of "Lute World," is sometimes the purveyor of very hard and wholesome common sense, at others of sentimental and superficial sophistry. In the latter class belongs a recent product of her pen en titled "In College A Dead Loss."

This little article purports to be a student's indictment of our college system and typifies the views of a number of Miss Robinson's contemporaries, and I suppose, to a certain extent, those of many who have gone through the school. But juniors and seniors have had this tendency to spar for time, however, indicates one of the causes of the annoyance. And there is, therefore, a greater need for such articles as Miss Robinson's, who can thus give us some breath of fresh air.

There is much evidence, by his own inherited prejudices and emotions, that there is an unconscious feeling that college education is something for other people. But there may be a great deal more to be said in favor of college education than meets the eye. There are some who have a sense of duty and have been trained in the right way. There are some who have a sense of duty and have been trained in the right way. There are some who have a sense of duty and have been trained in the right way. There are some who have a sense of duty and have been trained in the right way.

In the end, it is a question of the individual. And if he is not satisfied with the results of his college career, it is because he has not made the most of it. He has not made the most of it. He has not made the most of it. He has not made the most of it. He has not made the most of it.

But let us consider the facts. It is true that college is expensive, but it is also true that it is a valuable investment. The college graduate is, in most cases, more successful in his career than the man who went to work as a boy. The college graduate is, in most cases, more successful in his career than the man who went to work as a boy. The college graduate is, in most cases, more successful in his career than the man who went to work as a boy. The college graduate is, in most cases, more successful in his career than the man who went to work as a boy.

The value of college education is not to be measured by the standards of the world. It is to be measured by the standards of the world. It is to be measured by the standards of the world. It is to be measured by the standards of the world. It is to be measured by the standards of the world.

The office of the college is to promote the welfare of society, and it is in this that college education is valuable. It is in this that college education is valuable. It is in this that college education is valuable. It is in this that college education is valuable. It is in this that college education is valuable.

In this connection it is interesting to note that college students are among the best business men in the country. They are among the best business men in the country. They are among the best business men in the country. They are among the best business men in the country. They are among the best business men in the country.

Another quest for modern Balboas

COLUMBUS made possible Balbo, and just as Balbo made possible the pilots in transoceanic flight, we are now turning our vision into reality.

They are pioneering at the drafting board, in the manufacturing departments, in the field and in the work which underlies all activity—management. In executive and administrative control, in the supervisor's opportunity to guide and inspire, there is no limit to the possibilities of the progressive idea.

The quest again turns into new fields which have achieved much, but the way remains open for men of the coming generation to carry the telephone industry to still greater heights of service.

NEW TENNIS COURTS ASSURED FOR PROFS

Work Completed on Varsity "Clay-courts"

In recognition of the growing interest in tennis at Rice, construction has been completed on the new courts, which are to be completed adjacent to the Cotton Bowl in Houston. Work on these courts is to be completed by March, at which time the courts will be open for the use of the faculty and students. The proposed new court area will consist of two sets of 12 courts, with the courts being covered by a new roof. The court area will be equipped with new lighting and other facilities. The new courts will be used for intercollegiate matches and will serve as the home court for the varsity tennis team.

Arkansas walloped L. S. U. 28 to 0. This game may be taken an indication of the way the Owls are taking great pains to make their football team at the Institute. If we had a team of five 100 pounders, we would be a fairly formidable group of athletes. A capital band has been formed and there is an expectation of some good work. A comprehensive paper on the early history of rice was given to the Owls by Mr. Ashcraft, in express-time to the early Egyptian, Babylonian, and several other civilizations. Rice Fight Never Dies

By Bill Kane

Some say that anything is possible in the Rice-Ranger game this Saturday. At least that is the attitude shown by the majority of the student body.

Dr. Charles W. Morris, President of Rice, has said that "We are confident that we can win this game." And the men from the "Bread and Butter" are ready to prove his words.

The meeting took on the general air of a mixer, and the punch was attracted by the students of the university. It was given to us by the university officials.

The President was given a broad selection of exercises, and a course in the study of the world's finest men.
