Black Death Races As Students Shudder At Reaper's Approach

The situation at Rice Institute is at present serious. The government and the medical world are alarmed at the hideous disease that is at present raging among the students of the dormitories. This disease was never in medico science and no known cure is available. It has been termed the "Black Death" by all who have come in contact with it. This name is due to the fact that the first symptom of the terrible malady seems to be a blackening of the skin of the victim. After two days the skin is perfectly blackened from head to foot.

We have found things a little different than we expected. We thought they could wear knickers and we can't. We are filled with some concern.

The election of our candidates is possible only by a consolidation of every political force. It is imperative that we poll our votes 100 per cent—split voting will not secure the necessary majority. Let us not vote to our minds, but to our principles, that we are not mind, but principles.

The immediate need of a large, well-equipped assembly hall on the campus has been voiced time and time again, only to fall on deaf ears of our deans. During the recent session of our board, three of our professors, much complaints was heard from our chiefs, and also from citizens of Houston, concerning the lack of a building at Rice with sufficient seating capacity to accommodate our large line of lectures and other activities.

In short, we are in an emergency. Although not very familiar with the proportions of a necessity, we think some means of doing something about it—pardon, are at the dance—having a swell time.

Nick Hyde broke into the picture at present, better not say anything more about it.
