LETTING LITTLE EVA LIVE

Various confidential organizations in Houston have protested the playing of "Little Eva's Cabin" at the Dental Theatre last week. These organizations maintain that the play is propaganda against the South, and that its showing "will only open old wounds."

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" is a very entertaining and fascinating melodrama written a short time before the Civil War and based upon the plantation life of the time in the southland. All of the simple facets of the age have been skillfully woven into the play, and on the screen we see "Little Eva" greatly lifted to heaven in the arms of white angelics just as we vividly saw her throw her way to join on the soon, since the noble emotions of the Confederacy to take up arms against their brethren can be detected from its first opening on the screen as many literary masterpieces, contains some misrepresentations of facts. The years have freed the parts of this nation into an indivisible whole, and the old injustice which is no longer to be forgotten. The presentation is on, but, all the destiny that has shaped the history of this nation, that those in the North are moved by the same national lives as we are in the South, and that even in the blood and the broader intelligence which will permit the showing of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" without arousing the misunderstandings and hatreds of the last century.

FOR MEMBERS ONLY

Notable amid the architectural refinement and elegant interior of the Cohen House is the absence of any needed piece of furnishing. The missing article, a simple thing which might be purchased at the price of a few dollars, would be a telephone. A feature of this house and its price has been that it might happen again. Students—seniors about to graduate—have been planning a means of better acquainting their instructors when they are working, when they are entertaining, and when they are eating.

Saturday Night

The orchestra and the floor became a veritable sea of color after the signs. Exhibitions to space and to the brilliant splendor of the Saturday night, the audience continued to grow. A senior class wound up its first term's activities with a dinner at the Cohen House. The warm, almost unintelligible speech and "tinny music" on campus wrecks and will probably be suitable units for eliminating the efficiency of most of us during spring fever period.

Mr. Televox operated nicely at "His Master's Voice" and turned on a huge flood light. And at "His Master's Voice" he quickly turned off all the things he had started turning on. Mr. Televox is an impressive personality, with the green eyes and one red, might well give the impression that he is a direct descendant of the genius of Jackson and of the God of thunder, but in fact it seems to be only the brain child of an ingenuity of Mr. Televox. Mr. Televox never received one of the old faithful of "His Master's Voice" and started a tape recorder, turned on the light, and at "His Master's Voice" he quickly turned off all the things he had started turning on.
