Letters to the Editor

The editor of the Thresher has said that the writer of the editorial on page 13 of last week's Thresher is not to be considered an attack on the writer of the editorial but a defense of Rice and its traditions. The letter is published on the editorial page today, not in a lengthy letter in which he "begged to differ with the author of the editorial." The letter is written by an associate editor, Rowe S. Drake, and welcomes letters from students, but let students who disagree with its editorials be sure what they are disagreeing with.

The editorial which called forth the letter began with a quotation from the first verse of "The New World"—"...Out of it all, prosperity: whither thine erring sons, to the new world, thither to thine own old home...

"Yes, We Do Have Ban-an-aa," New Theme Song at Autry House

Everyone listening to the various stations in New York, I am sure, have heard the Autry House song. It is a new theme song and it will go on for at least one year. It was composed in January, 1929, by W. J. Bingham, a student of the University of Texas.

The song is based on the University of Texas football team, and it is supposed to create a mood of enthusiasm among the students.

"Nothing," said a student, "will bring about such a mood of enthusiasm among the students as the new theme song."

Students formed a little group to bring about such a mood of enthusiasm. The new theme song is supposed to create a mood of enthusiasm among the students.

The news from the Southwest is that the football team at the University of Texas is in the first place in the Southeastern Conference. The team has won all their games so far.
