Harvard Astronomer Noted

For Valuable Research Contributions

Dr. Harold Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory, will deliver the Pi Gamma Antiochian Lecture in the Student Union on Thursday, March 21. Dr.

Shapley graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1900, took his doctor's degree at Princeton in 1905, and obtained the degree of Doctor of Science at the Harvard College Observatory in California in 1910, and has been directly connected with the Harvard Observatory since 1913.

In 1912 he was a Professor of Astronomy at the Lawrence Institute, in 1917-1918 at the Law-rence Laboratory of Physics, and in 1924 at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he has been since 1926. Dr. Shapley delivered an address at the 42nd Annual Meeting of the Harvard University Alumni Association last December.

For his researches in astronomy and photography, he was the first to be awarded the медal of the National Academy of Sciences in 1916, and the Medal of the Royal Astronomical Society in the same year.

Dr. Shapley's latest book, "The New Star System," makes a strong appeal to the common sense of astronomers. The universe is described and shown beyond doubt as a system of planetary motion.

He is the author of several volumes of popular science, which are widely read in the United States and abroad.

Mental Indigestion

Those who have been around for some time are well aware of the fact that the heart of spring is the campus where the people are very often seen with a confused look on their faces. This is because the students are trying to cram as much information as they can into their minds before the end of the semester. In addition, the weather is often changeable, causing confusion and disorganization. Despite this, the students continue to work hard, attending classes and studying. They are all very busy, and their minds are filled with thoughts of the future.
In Bayonne, N.J., on Sunday, Coach Harry Vaughn has one of his most promising young returners, T. J. Morgan, who has been elected captain of the varsity. Morgan, a handsome runner from Dayton, is a candidate for the varsity basketball team. Coach Vaughn has uncovered another promising ground ball hitter, Chuck Brown, a star in both football and baseball. "Brown has been a surprise to the coaches," said Coach Vaughn. "He's a star in every sport he plays." Morgan has run against some of the world's best teams and has always done well.

Billy Morgan and Nelson Russell are two of the varsity baseball team's returning stars. Morgan has been described as "a man of the future." Russell is a valuable point getter. Ray Seaman Squyres and Williams are the other promising dash men in Tom Disch's Longhorns. The infield will have a veteran flavor and should improve his hitting considerably.
