First Veblen Lecture Here This Friday

Dr. Oskar Morgenstern will deliver the First Veblen Lecture, which is given annually by the Association for the Advancement of Science, at 8:15 p.m. Friday in the Graduate Library. The lecture will be given in conjunction with the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, which opens today.

Dr. Morgenstern, director of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, is a leading authority in the field of mathematical economics and the theory of games, and holder of the Veblen-Research Professorship.
The next four weeks will be long and arduous. Whether the approaching examination is for the best performance of the year, or for some other reason, the anxiety and stress that will be involved are justified. Whether we are genuinely prepared or not, we must all face the facts and do what we can to overcome any obstacles that may arise.

The next four weeks will eliminate the need for any last-minute preparations. The efforts are needed to reach the heights of excellence in the early hours of the morning and late at night. A lot of work must be done to just to be able to study. And the last four weeks remain in this semester, bringing to mind the fact that capability to meet the demands of the course is no longer a matter of mere survival. The capability to meet the demands of the course is the mark of the student, and the capability to meet the demands of the course is the mark of the student.
