Basketball Coaches

The Rice Owl basketball team ended the 1914 season with a five hundred per cent winning percentage. The reason for this unparalleled success was due to the exceptional coaching and the dedication of the athletes. The Owl team was led by Emmett Brunson, a former Rice graduate who was appointed assistant coach in the fall of 1914. Under his guidance, the team became a dominant force in the Southern Conference.

During the past year, the team played against a number of prominent opponents, including the Louisiana State University quintet and the University of Texas A&M. The Owl team lost both of their games against Texas A&M, but returned to take both games from Tulane.

The team was composed of some of Rice's finest athletes, such as Poim Brown, Delia Valle, and Emmett Brunson. The Owls' string of victories continued throughout the spring of 1915. In the preliminary game, the Owls defeated the University of Baylor, 105-95. The Owls' victory was due to the excellent play of their star athletes at the team.

In conclusion, the Owls' 1914-1915 season was a remarkable achievement, and their victory in the Southern Conference was a testament to their hard work and dedication. The Owls' performance is a clear indication of the success of the Rice Institute's education system, which emphasized the importance of athletics.

Axson Praises Wilson's Power of Portraiture

Woodrow Wilson's power of portraiture was described by a historian, Dr. Sigrid Roas, as a man of letters. The historian said: "Wilson, as a man of letters, has the power of portraiture. He describes a man out of the past as a man knows himself. His portraits are not only biographical, but they are also biographical in the sense that they are portraits of human beings who have been and are to be remembered."

Dr. Sigrid Roas was instrumental in the exhibition of the portraits of Wilson at the University of Chicago. The exhibition was held on March 10, and was attended by many prominent people. The portraits were well received, and many people commented on the power of portraiture of Wilson. The historian said: "Wilson is a master of portraiture. He has the power to depict the character of a man, and to reveal his inner thoughts."

Men and women say They Satisfy

FOR SOMETHING to "satisfy" you, means that it pleases you — that's what it's want you. This applies to cigarettes or anything. A cigarette has to taste right — not raw or too sweet. For a cigarette to "satisfy" it has to be mild —not strong, not harsh.

You can prove for yourself whether a cigarette is mild—whether it tastes better. And you can prove these things about Chesterton that so many men and women say they satisfy. Try them.

The cigarette that's milder — the cigarette that tastes better.
