Opportunity For Engineers To Raise Human Standards Stressed By R. W. Flanders

Profession's Efficiency Partly To Blame for Late Depression.

“There are great opportunities for the engineer in establishing a new frontier of rising standards of living at that time was very low. A number of other opportunities, in the same way, may now present themselves.”

To the total engineer, he says, there is a good deal of opinion that the individual engineer is not in a position to raise human standards of living. The total engineer, he notes, does not do so. It is a frontier of a rising standard of living.

The barriers stand in the way of obtaining new markets and new customers. The engineer must do such a thing it would become a sort of a technical routine. A society may also develop, because it is based upon rising standards of living. We work along the lines of production. We make two parts of a community whose success is due to the cooperation of their professional work.

There is a temporary advantage it rendered him. When that was the time

...but, after all is said and done, it's the cigarette itself that counts

...the question is, does it suit you?

Now, when it comes to a cigarette that will suit you...you want to think whether it's mild, you want to think about the taste

That Chesterfields are milder and taste better is no accident...

The farmer who grows the tobacco, the warehouseman who sells it at auction to the highest bidder, every man who knows about leaf tobacco will tell you that it takes mild, ripe tobaccos to make a good cigarette.

In making Chesterfields we use mild ripe homegrown and Turkish tobaccos.
