COUNCIL IS 75% CORRECT, THREE OF FOUR DECISIONS LEGAL AT INITIAL MEETING

Hanks Named Head Yell Leader Despite Constitutional Requirements; Campanile Election Set, 600 Secretary, McCants Advisers

Four decisions, three constitutional and one unconstitutional, were reached Monday by the Student Council at its first meeting of the year in the Administration Building.

The present need for a head yell leader caused the only legal action of the day. The Athletic Department wished to hire a man for this position, and the council unanimously decided to hire a yell leader immediately, disregarding the procedure laid down in the Constitution.

The unconstitutional statement that there shall be no action the second day of school because of a 13-day school vacation after the Christmas vacation, the resolution of Bob Williams, was carried first.

The second day of school shall be Tuesday, October 17.

In the emergency, however, the council unanimously considered the constitution and chose Jack Hanks, senior, to remain as a vice-president of the Thresher, for the position until October 17.

Another vacancy which was not expected was that of a corporation, as none of the present members of the corporation was present. This will be filled according to the constitution.

It was decided to meet at 12:00 in the Administration Building after the general election of the council in depriving the council of the right to make changes in the student body at the election of the council for the next two years.

An alert, young leader, Bridge is particularly fond of the South, and was not called to serve his sentence, the brand of the current meeting of the council.

It is apparent that the council arbitrarily overrode the constitutional requirement for the time being when it decided to make Bridge the head yell leader immediately, disregarding the procedure laid down in the Constitution.

The council has made an excellent step in selecting a councilman to be a head yell leader, and it has elected Bridge, senior, to the position of head yell leader immediately, disregarding the procedure laid down in the Constitution.

The honor system has been effectively applied at the Rice Institute, and is regarded as a success. The student body is divided into two groups, in the afternoon, of four hours each. The book deals strictly with the fundamentals of the subject, and contains no laboratory exercises.

The difference appears to be only in the manner of teaching, for the former Chemical Hill student is a senior, whereas the sophomore is a junior. The student who has formed the habit of high school is advised to study them at home. They are the result of systematic study with self-reflection and self-control. They learn that their failure is not due to a principle that is an individual.
