ACCOMMODATIONS FOR ENGINEERS ARE EXTENDED

More than 10,000 Feet Of Space Added

By Annex

More than 100 engineers have been added to the staff of the new design and production in this department in the past year. The expansion of the laboratory is due to the increased demand for the chemical and engineering laboratories of the university.

Dr. Harry B. Weiser, dean of the Rice Institute, has announced that the laboratory will be expanded by the addition of more than 10,000 square feet of space. The expansion will be completed by the end of the current academic year.

The expansion will be accomplished by the addition of new buildings and the remodeling of existing ones. The new buildings will be designed to accommodate the increased number of students and to provide more laboratory space.

The expansion will also include the addition of more equipment, including new laboratory apparatus and new chemical apparatus. The new buildings will be equipped with modern laboratory furniture and equipment.

The expansion will be financed by a grant from the state of Texas and by contributions from the chemical and engineering departments.

The expansion will be completed by the end of the current academic year. The new buildings will be ready for occupancy by the beginning of the next academic year.

the class of 1925, also an alumnus.

President's Message To Former Students—

To The Alumus

On the occasion of your annual homecoming we would like the Thresher to join in by telling the story of your alma mater. For you, we are proud, and for all that you hope to be.

We know you loved and admired the Institution, and we would again cheer you on your next deeds. Most of the feelings that move you to return to this place have survived appreciated time. From you and for us, may they deepen in loyalty and affection with the years.

In anticipation of your returning you are no doubt recalling, as I write, the very trees and hallways many of you saw planted and watered, the towers some of which you saw rise, the chimneys before halls you frequented, the thinkers and teachers you came to respect as the most honest of men and women of friends. Teachers and students will be proud and happy to see you; students are calling the towers, of collecting a bit with age, are bright and still beckoning; and I have often wondered how much the trees are aware of. You will have difficulty in believing, just as sometimes we have difficulty in believing, that your existence on the campus are as great or old or big as you were.

But they are. And they are awaiting your coming, eager to show you attention and to do you honor.

Your approaching reunion will be unique in the circumstances that you will be sitting at this first Rice conference game in the new stadium. Towards the conclusion of the stadium you have contributed towards in the dedication you will share your gratitude for the generosity and initiative of the teachers and their four hundred associates in providing the funds for so beautiful a structure. Before you carry with you not only our glowing pled but also, I trust, a renewed sense of duty, the serving of grandeur, moderation of temper, and magnanimity of spirit for the troubled and confused times in which we live, and from which civilization must find a way out or perish.

You will agree with me, I think, that Wordsworth pointed out for inspection this year's Homecoming at Rice University.

We will have a number of events planned for the weekend, including a football game against the Texas students. This game will be held at 1:00 p.m. on Saturday. The game will be played on the Rice campus, and students are encouraged to attend.

Feet at Home

As many students will welcome us when we return to Rice Institute for the Fall, and whether they are old friends or newcomer students, we wish to express our gratitude for the fine work they have done, and to hope that they will continue to support the Institution.

Pictures in the Book

The members of the Texas football team have already got a substantial part of their handkerchief, for the Contingent. It seems expected for any student to contribute the necessary money to have the picture placed in the yearbook.

In June each member of the football team will receive and sign a copy of the yearbook, and the students who do not find their picture in it will be displeased.
