New Curriculum Aims at Wide General Knowledge

The new revised curriculum, re-vised in several departments and approved by the college faculty, is expected to bring a number of changes in the educational program of the Rice Institute.

The curriculum, which is to go into effect next term, is the result of a study of the basic humanities and sciences. This new program aims at providing a better understanding of the world and its problems. Before Screaming."

Several sections should be submitted to council members. Schumacher Heads Committee for Negroes to discuss the organization of educational societies. Engineering, believes that this program has been adopted by several engineering societies.

The cooperation of all veterans is necessary to accomplish this purpose.

Blow Out the Tires

We are watching, when we can, with a growing interest the results of the new "Blow Out the Tires" plan that is being announced at a few places in the country.

It is a plan that promises to do a tremendous amount of good for the cause of non-alcoholism. By the simple act of blowing out the tires, each individual can contribute to the solution of the problem.

There are many other ways in which people can help to solve this problem. For example, by not using alcohol at all, or by limiting their intake to moderate amounts.

We hope that more people will join in this important effort to combat alcoholism.

ON THE TELEPHONE, TOO!

This is broadcasting as you see it. What you do not see are the thousands of miles of telephone wire and cable that link broadcasting stations from coast to coast, that make networks possible.

The administration of these vast broadcasting links requires the varied skills of college graduates.

This is but one of the many interesting phases of the telephone business. There's opportunity and adventure in telephone work.

Deep in my mind this week is "When has this happened before?" It seems that there is one answer to this question: Never. Or at least not on this earth. The Houston crowd is sitting on the edge of its seat waiting for the big one. The pull-out, the pull-in, the kick-off. The referee flips over the coin, and the game is on. Last week we had the Texas-OU game. Now we have the Rice-Arkansas game. Last week for the Texas crowd it was the "Red-Racoon" game. This week it is the "Texas Longhorns-Rice Owls" game. While I'm in the midst of this week's football game, let me take a look at last week's game. The Texas-OU game was a game of two teams who were evenly matched. The game was decided in the second half when OU scored a touchdown. The Rice-Arkansas game is a game of two teams who are evenly matched. The game is decided in the first half when Rice scores a touchdown.

Sad News From the South

From the South comes the news that the University of Arkansas is going to give up its football team. The university has been in financial trouble for several years, but the news that it is going to give up its football team is still shocking. The university has a long history of football success, and giving up the team will be a major loss for the university and its fans. The decision to give up the team was made after the university's board of trustees met and discussed the financial situation. The board decided that the football team was no longer sustainable financially, and it was better to give it up rather than continue to lose money.

Clemson Football Team

Clemson University has announced that it will be suspending its football program. The decision was made after a long period of financial struggle and declining attendance. The university has been in a financial crisis for several years, and the football team has not been able to bring in enough revenue to cover its expenses. The decision to suspend the football program was made after much consideration and discussion with various stakeholders, including the university's board of trustees, the football coaching staff, and student-athletes. The university hopes to use the funds saved from the program to support other athletic programs and academic initiatives.
Rompic Rice Rides Rampant Over Red Raiders

Almost Everyone In Uniform Plays As Flock Accumulates 40-7 Victory Over Texas Tech

Back in the friendly environs of their own home last, the Big Pot Owl (kickoff) rolled to a 40-7 victory over an outmanned Texas Tech Team.

Whether the boys play better at home, or the opposition has been weaker, the home games are in an open question, but Uncle Jess' white-jerseyed Owls have hung up two triumphed victories before the home crowd, while they have not faced too stiff an array of teams this fall. Anyway, after a satisfactory first quarter, Rice went on and won despite what appeared to be a chilly first quarter. One might have noticed the absence of the home crowd, noted to be evidencing the sandwich conference atmosphere.

This game was postponed by choice. Neither team was particularly interested, and the visitors, one or two, were as interested in the Red Raider defense as they were in the Owl defense.

Uncle Jess' white-jerseyed Owls, led by their leader, Doc Armstrong, were the only team to make any real dent in the Tech goal line. Though they have not fared too well at the finish, the Blue Old Owl line was an outstanding factor in the Owls' victory.

The Owls were cautioned on the first pass, but it was not a real masher. The second pass went over the Tech goal line. The Owl line was left to do the hard work. The Owls played their usual game of tough defense and will continue to do so until the Owls are out of the game. This is their last game, and they hope to do well.

Boys play better at home, or the opposition has been weaker. The Owl line has been developing, and will continue to do so until the Owls are out of the game. This is their last game, and they hope to do well.

Bubba Riggs, the Owl line, had some trouble with his own end, but he finally passed over the Tech goal line. The Owls played their usual game of tough defense and will continue to do so until the Owls are out of the game. This is their last game, and they hope to do well.

Prentis Pontoon was an ordinary academic— he was just a student, a few years back. Prentis was equally solid at his morning classes— between classics and chemistry. The Administrators’ lectures and briefly minced about in the courtyard between classes and meals— and he didn’t work as well as Danoff’s lectures and frequently missed his appointments with the dean. But there were days... and days when he thoroughly enjoyed himself in turn— three weeks for a date that was followed by three weeks for a dance that was followed by three weeks for a date. The last dance was the best of all, and the moment he saw her he was in love, but at least he was interested.

In Prentis’ mind it was one of the back booths, lie was introduced for Prentis by an old-yearman. They went there to listen to Dr. Moraud who was unable to tape the presses, and Prentis went there to hear the English medieval literature lecture. He had met Prentis at the door, which was closed by its own weight and hadintoned after a moment: "Dr. Moraud— I’ll have to stop you— please, Dr. Moraud— I’ll have to stop you— you can’t—"

Dr. Moraud was the Frenchman of a French accent who had written a novel called "Mairzy Doats." It was set in the French countryside, and it was about a young woman who could do all sorts of things, but she didn’t realize it until she was about to die. The book was a huge success, and it was then that Prentis met Prentis’ wife, who was a student at Rice University. They fell in love immediately, and Prentis was certain that they would get married.

But one day an interesting thing happened. Prentis was at a table, but rapidly pulled the one ad-liner and Whiting have just returned from the South-Central Modern Languages association convention in B-

"That’s ‘Mairzy Doats,’ meat of ‘Mairzy Doats,’ meat of ‘Mairzy Doats,’ meat of ‘Mairzy Doats,’ meat of ‘Mairzy Doats,’ meat of ‘Mairzy Doats,’ meat of ‘Mairzy Doats,’ meat of ‘Mairzy Doats,’ meat of ‘Mairzy Doats,’ meat of ‘Mairzy Doats,’ meat of ‘Mairzy Doats,’”—Louis Gum Slot (Col. 37966.)

"It’s a really small whooping after a mean boiling of Cigarettes. The men who thought they had a chance were soon found out, but Prentis was not one of them. Prentis was a man who thought he knew what he was doing, and he was not going to be fooled by anyone. But when he showed up in a world full of pins, his mind was made up."

The veterans and their training establishments are subject to decide whether or not to discontinue their training programs. The veterans who receive unearned subsistence allowances overpaid will have to be considered when they were in the service.

Darned if we can figure this one out. But one thing is certain: Prentis took the money and used it, but at least he resorted to the veterans’ offices.
