To Invest Wisely?

A letter printed elsewhere in this issue makes it necessary for us to explain more fully our stand on charities.

Our plan, as reported last week, is for Rice students to raise money to aid foreign students to study at the Institute, rather than for students to donate to an organized charity. Unfortunately, so many students prefer the World Student Service Fund because it involves no organization.

Raymond Lantford, the writer of the letter, misunderstands the basis of our proposal; he states that our idea is "to display to everyone our generous nature." He holds, perhaps correctly, that the World Student Service Fund is better equipped to invest our money wisely to sustain the 400,000 students of war-stricken countries.

There is no doubt that funds donated from a nationwide campus could aid more foreign students than the $200,000 deemed necessary for our plan.

But Rice is only one school in the United States. Only the most naive student will attach all of the money donated to the World Student Service Fund to actually go to aid foreign students. A large part of each dollar donated will go for salaries of workers, the postage, printing, stationary, and other office expenses.

Another thing about the WSSF is that rice is a prepayment. It is probable that part of the money will be spent for all community-dominated necessities.

The origin of our idea is not that people will "Oh how generous!"—pretend we do not give a twit whether "they" use our prepayment or not. The original is that we wish to know that all of our donated money is spent as we intend it. We are to bring a foreign student one book, payable expenses and transportation, doors may see the rest within their means and out.

The national effort would be to bring back with him a better idea of America under our plan, than if we were given in his home school this financial aid of paper and a letter instead of a $100 or $500 course in American life.

Perhaps our genuine attitude toward organized charities will be shown when if we can get a few facts. For instance, the branch in a wealthy charity with which we are familiar contains a "directorate" at $1,000 a month, 12 months of the year. About two dozen people are "entrusted" to run the offices of the society, instead of the small four or five people that make a modest paid vacation each year.

When decided on have names called and have names of less importance.

Perhaps all of these are not true; but one cannot write all the facts.

If we knew that the WSSF would invest all our money wisely, we would be glad to support it. But we do not know this.

Meet Your Representative

Last week the student council passed a motion whereby representatives of each class would hold regular meetings with their class to discuss every class work.

The purpose of this motion is to promote closer contact and understanding between the class representatives and the respective classes.

This is a definite move toward a more representative council group. The fact that the same class is already enacting this bill into action more than it is not yet a feature of the student body.

It is important for the council to function as a voice of the majority that these meetings be well attended. It is not proper for the faculty students to make company the chairman of the council, as well as express their views, to the exclusion of the faculty.

It is principally one of the few convictions that might make advantage of the class system. Not through thoughtless interest in such a plan, get any recognition.
Owls Shatter Longhorn Reign Over Conference Basketball
By Giving Them A 54-47 Defeat

Texas University's reign over Southwest Conference basketball came to an abrupt close at Gregory Gym Monday when the red hot Rice Owls handed them a convincing 47-54 thrashing.

The Owls virtually wrapped up the pennant for the first time in their history when they upset a team that was considered the big favorite in the Southwest Conference.

The Owls were not without their troubles, but the pressure they put on the Longhorns was too much for them to handle.

In the first half, the Owls led, 23-21, and the half finished with 25 minutes of the second half, Bice leading 35-10.

The Owls held the Longhorns scoreless for three minutes and put the Longhorns on the defensive.

On the defensive, the Owls were able to hold the Longhorns to 16 of 32 field goals.

The Owls were led by Hiram Walker, who scored 16 points, and Bice, who had 13 points.

WILL department got wind of an exhibit by Houston artists in the local art movement from a certain student of the institute. Seeing a keen inspired source, the name was verified, and Monday afternoon found the THRESHER’s aquapalooza drifting majestically through the marble halls of the art museum.

In the field of art criticism, there were a few hot but very uncertain advances. “Bridge of Life,” by Michael Collins, a striking piece of modern sculpture, was a dream to the artistic observer. It was a real eye-opener to the layman and a clear indication of the trend in art today. The artist is to be commended for his interest in the subject. It is a matter of some concern that the piece was damaged by a small boy in the gallery, but the qua...
