Double College Enrollment?

Around the first of the year President Truman's commission on higher education published final results and conclusions to its 17-month study. While this report has not caused too big a splash in journalism circles, certain recommendations are starting, to say the least.

First of all the commission wants to double the college enrollment by 1960. It also wants to extend free public education through the first two years in college. The reasons for proposing such a double jump in college enrollments stem from a group of statistics.

Of all the American population in 1950 only 10 percent had ever attended college, less than 5 percent had finished four years of college. The Bureau of Labor Statistics has estimated that the number of persons needed in professional and semi-professional positions will increase from 2.8 million in 1950 to 3.5 million in 1960.

We find that the commission has placed the finger on the wrong spot. Perhaps radically, we believe that a college education should at least equal 25 percent of the total college enrollment. These people have neither the proper aptitude, nor the ability, nor the desire to utilize a college education. There are a lot of deadbeats interfering with other people's educational progress. The commission should start the changes in the bottom and middle, not the top of the American educational pyramid.

The high schools and junior high schools could benefit much more from federal or increased state aid. Perhaps that fresh bread would be instantly better equipped for college.

The report further states that a "major barrier arises from the millions of the thousands of the mentally retarded youth come from families too poor to enable them to enter college." We doubt the existence of such a barrier.

We maintained that no matter how poor an individual or his family is, this individual can go to college. If an individual doesn't enough drive and ambition to work his way through university, he hasn't the motivation to benefit and afford higher education. It is not necessary for him to work and support his family, the institution of two years of free college education will not aid him. In fact, the increased field of study will hinder him.

To Develop an Idea

Last week the newly organized Forum committee put out the best program in their brief period of organization. The committee held a meeting to discuss the ideas of putting together a single lifetime has been a modern miracle. Yet it is only the beginning.

There are many number of men in the telephone business in 1950 and 1960 than now. It just can't help being this way. For all the business men and women, there are few more interesting and necessary. So the feature is helpful for those who make telephone their life work. For them, "The best is yet to be."
Rice Beats Rice 21-0 As Blues Grays Have Last Scrimmage

by David Kelly

The Rice football team got together last Saturday and put on an exhibition which according to those who were present, will be well represented on the gridiron next year.

The Blue, or regulars, took a 21-0 victory, but only after a terrific struggle which showed that the Blue will have to face hard fighters if they want to win.

On the Rice team, Geo. Ross and John Hoffman will be the main men. The Blue will have to be on their best form if they want to stand a chance.

Footlights

What's wrong with American movies? In 1800 words or less, please explain. At this present moment, I rank the movies in a particular order, which I think is the writers' advantage.

But in the next breath, it's: "Oh, they're not. I mean, the French and Italian films are great, but the American films are terrible, just terrible." The problems with American films are not just limited to the film industry, but also extend to the way we consume them.

One of the most popular fads indulged in by movie critics is to compare American films to foreign films, much to the latter's advantage. In the case of "The Godfather," the book was released in 1960, and the film was released in 1972. The relationship of non-Christian films and ideologies will also be discussed.

In the words of "Slackers," "The Godfather" is a film that is considered to be a classic of American cinema. However, the film is not without its flaws. The film is over two hours long, and many critics feel that it is too long. The film is also criticized for its pacing, with some critics feeling that the film is slow and unengaging.

The film is also known for its characters. The character of Vito Corleone, played by Marlon Brando, is considered to be a classic of American cinema. However, the film is also criticized for its portrayal of women. Many critics feel that the female characters are underdeveloped and are not given enough screen time.

In conclusion, "The Godfather" is a film that is considered to be a classic of American cinema. However, the film is not without its flaws. The film is criticized for its pacing, its portrayal of women, and its length. Despite these criticisms, the film is still considered to be a classic of American cinema.
