Twelve New Professors

languages

Dr. Throckmorton, shown as professor of French, is an Oxford University in England, and is noted for his removal of corruption and political realignment, America is in dire need of a strong, able, courageous leader. A leader who is a tested politician, who is experienced in the mechanics of government, and who is noted for his removal of corruption from government.

We submit that Adlai Stevenson is the man better qualified on all accounts to be President of the United States. Just since his nomination, instead of weaseling on most issues, Stevenson faced the American Legion and labor and told both that special interests would not receive favors which would harm the American people.

So far as the College Department is concerned, the new faculty is composed of thirty-one members, including the present officers and class officers, as well as the new officers. The new faculty includes a number of experienced teachers, as well as a number of teachers who are new to the College Department.

SC Swings Into Non-Violent Action

At approximately 7:09 PM on Wednesday, September 24, the SC, known as the Rice Student Association started functioning. This illustration of obvious leaders in student government was called to order by Robert J. McCann and led a rather Republican group on all business through the meeting, being stamped on only one or two occasions. These occasions were during the announcement of all students officers no longer with us and McCann, although not committing himself definitely on the present question, submitted something of the "right" in the back or "we're currently conducting research on the subject of..." and a non-member of the Bills.

Bills

John McClintoch, bookkeeper for the Newcomer's Association, asked for the go-ahead to pay several bills accrued during the summer months. He pointed out that since the Council is currently in a financial bind and not committing himself definitely on the present question, submitted something of the "right" in the back or "we're currently conducting research on the subject of..." and a non-member of the Bills.

"We did the next morning we marched up and met this lovely man, told him Houston didn't sound exactly like that and that we thought it was disgraceful. So he went back to the French Quarter with us and we walked around until we found the first man. Well, he tried to block our way but the Chamber of Commerce man said he was going to the Juniper Chamber of Commerce and explained that we had an incident on a desk, "we had an incident in the French Quarter.""
New Librarian Tells Escape From Dachau

"I was arrested by the Nazi police," Dr. Casimir Bulas, Rice's new acquisitions librarian, commented, "On November 6, 1939, together with the greater part of the teaching body of the University of Cracow at a sham conference, to which we had been invited by the President of the University at the request of the Gestapo. We were deported (about 170 persons) to Sachsenhausen (Oranienburg-Berlin), from which almost all men above the fortieth year of age were released, on February 8, 1940. The younger group, on March 9, 1940, to Dachau in Bavaria, whence I was released on April 12, 1940, thanks to the intervention of the French Government."

ARCHAEOLOGIST

Added to the Fondren staff this summer to supervise the purchase of new books and to handle research problems, Bulas arrived in the United States in December of 1951. An archaeological specialist, the new librarian will be longer than most of us in forgetting the little American who threw Europe into the turmoil of a world war. Dr. Bulas' life is a record of the conflict.

POLISH

Born in 1908 at Waterloo, Poland, Bulas fought in the war against Soviet Russia, volunteering in 1920. His first scholastic training was at a "classical gymnasium", an institution corresponding to a combination of the American high-school and junior college. Here he had eight years of Latin and six years of Ancient Greek.

LINGUIST

In addition to these languages, the new librarian has a speaking knowledge of English, German, Spanish, Italian, Polish, Russian, Modern Greek, and French. After his years in the gymnasium, he studied classical archaeology and philology, as well as Turkish, Arabic, and Persian at the University of Cracow. After trips to France and Italy to study collections of ancient art, Bulas was graduated at a Ph.D. from Cracow. The title of his thesis was, "Les Illustrations Antiques de Iliade."

His specialty is Modern Greek. Before being appointed foreign member of the French School of Archaeology at Athens in 1930, he spent some time studying at Dresden, Munich, Brussels, London, Oxford, and Cambridge.

LECTURER

Returning to Cracow in 1929, Dr. Bulas became a lecturer at the University. During this period, he began to deliver broadcasts in Modern Greek. He was the first person to go on the air in this language, so his popularity was understandably tremendous. To the American, this might appear somewhat paradoxical; university professors rarely play radio announcer.

Europe Thru The Eyes of Girl Scouts

By Nancy Wachman and Nancy Sullivan

"Sorry, all flights from Brussels to New York are full until the first of October." This is how we were greeted in Brussels, Belgium, as we attempted to begin our journey home after two months in Europe. Our quickly made plans to enter the University of Brussels were ruined when the airline refused to accept us. We were disappointed, but we decided to proceed to Belgium until after their retreat in 1945, giving language lessons and making translations. The Germans had fled, and Dr. Bulas realized this.

This is how we were greeted in Brussels, Belgium, as we attempted to begin our journey home after two months in Europe. Our quickly made plans to enter the University of Brussels were ruined when the airline refused to accept us. We were disappointed, but we decided to proceed to Belgium until after their retreat in 1945, giving language lessons and making translations. The Germans had fled, and Dr. Bulas realized this.

In 1935, Dr. Bulas married. His wife, who holds a Master's degree in classical philosophy, shares her husband's interests. DACHAU

After his release from Dachau in 1945, Bulas spent some years giving language lessons and making translations. The Germans had closed all the schools, and it was not until after their retreat in 1945 that the University of Krakow was re-opened when Bulas resumed his teaching duties. In 1946, he accepted the position of Professor of Latin at the University of Torun. At this time, however, Poland was very unsettled; and so he decided to return to France.

"However," he says, "I did not have any illusions about the political developments in Poland; I expected to accept the proposal of the Polish Academy of Sciences in Cracow to go to France in order to prevent the destruction of the library in Krakow." This was in 1947. The new Poland had not yet found its political organization, and in an attempt to maintain contact with the French government, he was to encounter trouble from the Stalinist organization, the communists.

Intrigue

"I am not a politician," he says, "I became an object of intrigue on the part of the Polish Bureau in Rome and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Warsaw for my constant attempt to keep the library from becoming an instrument of the present regime in Poland, for Communist propagandists. At the same time, I was fully aware that the Polish Academy of Science in Krakow was to be abolished and that, in its place, a library to be founded in Communist hands. Consequently, when I was invited, on June 25, 1949, for a temporary service at the Ministry of Education in Warsaw, I refused to comply in the hope that my presence in Rome I would be able to save the library for Polish culture abroad. The Academy in Cracow was, of course, ordered to demand its closure, but I refused to hand over the library to the Polish embassy in Rome. At last, at Christmas of 1949, I came to Rome to become the Secretary General of the Polish Academy of Science in Cracow, who, in the capacity of its legal representative, could not refuse to comply, forced me to resign and to hand him over the library. The Academy was abolished not a year later, in the fall of 1951.

NEW JOB

"In the meantime, on Sept. 1, 1949, I had been appointed Vice-President of the Bibliotheca Hertziana in Rome, an ex-German library for History of Art, in behalf of the International Union of the Institutes of Archaeology, History, and the History of Art in Rome, who was President, at that time, Prof. Fritz Saxl of Prague, President of the University of Prague, New York, I was charged with the catalogues and handled the whole correspondence in four campaigns; for a half year, during the absence of the President, who had a child in the Netherlands, I also was the general manager of the library.

GREECE

By this time, Bulas's interest in modern Greece became even more apparent. He was appointed Greek Reader at the University of Brussels, where he was able to continue his research in classical Greek literature. As a result, he has published several articles on Greek history and culture, and his work has been widely praised.

MADONNA TRIANGLE

A BOY... A GIRL... TV

Let's face it. Living rooms are still in style. But a third party is inching its way in to form a new local alliance.

And no wonder. Few can resist this miracle that has brought the world and set it down in front of you. Living history, flowing past your eyes. Politics. U. N. and World. Personality. Personalities.

We in the Bell System help to put you in this front-row seat on history. Bell Laboratories research contributed to TV de-development. Now our radio-relay systems and coax cables carry the images between cities and across the country.

Our part in TV transmission is only one among dozens of activities that keep us in the front line of modern communications. They are all unique, we believe, why college people should find out what the Bell System has to offer in the way of opportunities.

Why don't you ask your college placement office about it?
