If you've been looking for tickets, you never had a chance. Faculty changes, pass-fail rules At the second and final meeting of the Faculty Senate for the semester, held Monday afternoon, December 17, in the Chemistry Lecture Hall, the time for considering faculty changes was extended to the end of the month. The votes were taken on Wednesday, the day before the last day of class, which was ruled an academic holiday. The voting period of the last week of the month was extended to the end of the semester, according to Dr. Harold Hyman, Professor of History, who made it official.

Many people expressed concerns with the current pass-fail system, including one professor who felt that the system was not fair. Some professors also felt that the changes would help stifle the widely-held opinion that men in high places would provide a definite, final answer to the question of the future and the end of the system of a number-grade was changing a course registered for the end of the fourth week. The end of the fourth week. The end of the fourth week. The end of the fourth week. The end of the fourth week.

Some of the charges which could be brought against Nixon include conspiracy, obstruction of justice, bribery, and income tax evasion, misuse of public funds, and others. Dr. Harold Hyman, Professor of History, made it clear that the talks of that Congress can impeach and convict the President for "political offenses" as well as criminal offenses. This interpretation, which has been supported in previous impeachment cases involving federal judges, makes practically anything an impeachable offense. However, Andrew Jackson was successfully defended in 1863 by the argument that the charges against him were not criminal. The last efforts of impeachment can be ignored. Very likely such a process would drag on for several months, leaving the country in a leadership vacuum. The act of impeachment will reinforce those who believe that the Democrats, liberals, and other Communists are out to get Nixon.

ETS seeks student input on GRE's

by DANA BLANKENHORN

The advanced undergraduates' seminar on the Princeton Graduate Record Examinations (P.SAT) gave a new meaning to the oft-cited statement (P.SAT) which bestows the acceptance (or rejection) at the Grad School of choice.

The GRE, first administered in 1952, by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching (CFT), is now in the control of the Educational Testing Service (ETS) and its subsidiary, the Graduate Record Examinations Board (GREB).

GREB's come in two types, Advanced (Ad) and Aptitude (Apt). They are distinguished by their difficulty and price, the Ad costing more than the Apt. Ad's are compiled by a "committe of scholars" in the field's field. Additionally, questions are garnered from the staff of ETS, and professional item writers. Apt's are the work of the Test Development Section (TDS) of ETS.

The GREB has also other functions in the field of Graduate Education such as its Minority Graduate Student Literacy Service (MGSLS), which helps Graduate Schools find the proper ratio of underprivileged and minority students and aims to provide a final test that will keep many students and Milton Cronin, Seminar Publicity Chair, summarized a draft that this year's participants would include. The student fee is $30.00. Registration inquiries should be directed to ETS, 212 HAMILTON STREET, HARRISON HALL.

fan after finals. Rice led 14- 3 in a sloppy first half featuring 24 turnovers and a 26 percent shooting percentage for the Owls from the floor.

The visiting Rams lead the game by outsourcing the Owls 24-6 in the first minute of the second half. The problem of poor second half starts was too much to play the Owls throughout the road trip. The silent K quickly evaluated the situation, reminding, "When you shoot like that you don't deserve to score."

After Christmas, on in San Diego, Rice pulled a 5-6 win over the San Diego State Aztecs. The Aztecs were in powerhouse form, having been blown out by fairly tough opponents such as Oklahoma, Arizona, and Oral Roberts, but they had just come off of an impressive upset of highly-touted Kansas State when the Owls denied them behind on an 18-point performance by Champion.

The next night in Santa Barbara, Koehlowski began his week-long tirade against the refs, as his charges commenced a four game win streak. The only loss was 93-80, at the hands of USC. The Santa Barbara’s had pumped Arizona and ripped SMU before disposing of Rice in a contest. Koehlowski described as "one of the worst officiated games ever." Charles Daniels paced the Owls with 20 points and Pete Meyers and Tim Morarity chipped in 14 apiece. But the game was lost on the boards as we were out-rebounded soundly 56-43.

1974 found the Owls in Hawaii, long-exclude trip to the U. S. Service Team 90-89. Starters were only limited as the five varsity freshmen scored half the points. Los Angeles, Oregon State, Oral Roberts, and Arkansas, but they had just come off of an impressive upset of highly-touted Kansas State.

The big reason for Dynasty's showdown will be by Montjoy. Led by Bert Gotzmann's 26 points, the Owls play Dynasty in the first round and will assume the dubious honor of tournament favorites. Montjoy also lines Walt Sperlinger (19.5) and Wayne Takes (11.7) as double-figure scorers. With superior talent, the Owls need only be able to keep the other four players from scoring and they'll be able to win the game.

Demons uncovered in vivid film version of Exorcist

The terrors of demonic possession are graphically displayed in The Exorcist, a movie based on the best-selling novel based on (horrors!) the truth, a documented case. Audiences are meeting at the Village Theater to be enlightened and, for many, to have the living daylights scared out of them. Oscar-winning director William Friedkin is responsible for the effectiveness of this film, and there is quite an elaborate set for the rather involved plot outline to the screen; there is some especially good editing and a pointed, well-written script (The French Connection) and Exorcist author-adapter-film-maker William Peter Blatty have rendered an adequate transfer of the Saturday night Rice plays once again at Baylor, facing UC. The Cougars are not off to their usual fast start. Nevertheless, they are out of our class and should win handily, although they are definitely weaker than Vanderbilt or Hawaii. Conference play begins Tuesday at Baylor. The Bears have a good record, but if this is an exhibition that could be described as best as very mediocr.
