It’s obvious that nobody really wants to be RPC secretary simply to record and distribute the minutes of the RPC meetings. Although that is the duty of the secretary, that is not what motivates people to run for the office. (It’s certainly not my primary reason.) The allure of being RPC secretary lies with his or her inclusion on the RPC Executive Committee and Committee of the Whole as a full voting member. Being on a policy-making committee is important. Arranging programs effectively for university groups is important.

RPC means Rice Program Council. One of my roommates didn’t know this until last week. That is because the RPC doesn’t get enough publicity. Everyone has heard about the ski trip, but if you don’t ski, who cares? The ski trip and various road trips are, seriously, the only RPC activities that I found to be really well-publicized this year. I had no idea until recently that there were RPC concert and cultural events committees. Why aren’t these things publicized more? Why wasn’t there some RPC university-wide activity during freshman week? At least that would have let me know what it was.

The RPC should also take some responsibility for informing students about events sponsored by other university groups. I heard Admiral Bobby Inman speak here recently, but hardly anyone really knew who he was. The ski trip shouldn’t have been promoted more fully.

The RPC schedule was packed with blue calendars every semester, which is good. But why don’t they help the campus’ various groups promote their productions on different nights, so that students can enjoy more than one performance rather than choosing? There’s a weekend in March coming up on which four of the concert groups have musicals and plays scheduled. I’ve talked to people in these groups who are disappointed because they will not be able to see the others. The RPC should have done something about that.

We’re serious about having fun. The worst mistake we ever made was taking things too seriously; we intend to make sure you never make the same mistake. We’re not concerned about the probable higher drinking age: we know that Rice students can have a good time with or without alcohol. Either way we’re out to have a good time. They can’t stop us now. So grab your sunglasses and help the Blues Brothers put the shorts back to.

The Rice Programs Council is a fundamental organization for student activity. I want to contribute to the formation and development of events such as Beer-Bike, TGs, Rondolet, and various other social functions which are an integral part of Rice life.

One of the main tasks of the RPC Secretary is to administer to the council by attending and keeping minutes at all the meetings. The secretary’s power to vote provides direct communication with the executive committee, enabling her to voice the opinions of fellow students.

I feel that I have the qualifications and enthusiasm to work as RPC Secretary and, if elected, I promise to do my best to make sure everyone else does too. Our primary goal is to rock the whole campus. We promise minutes worth reading, the time and energy necessary for good parties, trips, forms, and TGs, and a more responsive council. Being co-secretaries, we (Mike and Bob) offer numerous advantages. Twice the people means twice the ability to do work. Our cooperative efforts, coupled with our administrative and service experience, makes short work of difficult tasks.

During my past years at Rice University, I have come to appreciate the importance and advantages afforded by a strong Honor System and an active Honor Council. I am interested in expanding the role of the Honor Council beyond simply acting as a mechanism for the administration of penalties. I feel that we can improve the system of penalties, which are currently too obscure in the past. As your representative, I will work to publicize general penalties for recent efforts of the council to improve them.

Kevin Dowden
Hi! My name is Kevin Dowden and I've been an Honor Council Member for two years. I've worked to keep the Honor System alive and visible. If given the chance, I will work hard and do my very best. Please give me that chance.

The Honor System is an integral part of our education here at Rice. It ensures the success of the council depends on us, both in our willingness to comply with the system, and to fairly administer it. I strongly believe in its benefits, and would like to serve you as a member-at-large of the Honor Council. Simply put, I will do my best to maintain the integrity of the Honor System.

Chris Lowrance
My name is Chris Lowrance, and I am running for the position of Senior Representative of the Honor Council. Though I have not had any experience on the Honor Council, I am very concerned with the problems of the Honor System and how to address them. I believe that I can bring new life and energy to the Honor System.
