Rhosymedre . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . Ralph Vaughan Williams (1872-1958)
(orchestration by Arnold Foster)

Fantasia on Christmas Carols . . . . . . . . . . Ralph Vaughan Williams Robert Ames, baritone

Friede auf Erden, Op. 13 . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . Arnold Schönberg (1874-1951)

As the shepherds left their flock, carrying the angel's word through the humble door to the mother and the child, the heavenly choirs continued to sing in the starry vault and the heavens continued to ring out: "Peace, peace on earth!" Since the angel so advised, oh how many bloody deeds of strife have been committed by men in armour on wild horses! In how many a holy night sang the choir of spectres timourously, urgently pleading, softly accusing: "Peace, peace on earth!" Yet there is a constant faith that the meek shall not fall prey to every brazen murderous deed for all times! Something like justice lives and weaves even in murder and horror, and a kingdom will arise that seeks peace on earth. Slowly it will evolve and perform its holy office, forging arms without peril, flaming swords for right. And a princely generation will bloom with strong sons whose bright trumpets will resound: "Peace, peace on earth!"
