My dear Raazh

I am dreadfully sorry to hear from your telegram that there have been further differences with Demetris. I do think it is not necessary for me now to know why about it. What happened in December nearly killed me.

The year is long & I do not want to have another such difference now which be more than I could bear. Some days I feel as if the December thing had kept a secret knife would never heal.

Unless I hear from you that the matter is over which I could bear what I will not open either your letter or Demetris's.

P.S. I saw the report of the Baker's meeting. Is there any fresh news about Northbrook?

Herbert has not written since I arrived & I cannot guess what the difference is about. He is constitutional unable to see any of the other person's points of view. That is the chief trouble. If the matter concerns Baker's scheme of readjustment in relation to the Reber's. Letting you know I have no sympathy whatever with it. It is merely an accident's point of view. But I don't want to be concerned with it & I can avoid it.

I trust all goes well at home, which is the chief matter. I sleep better last night & the night before, & people if I see looking very much better. I am trying hard to get round. You have a big parcel of flannel, & I hope you will keep up heat & get stronger on. Don't be too busy with the end of the spring of spring time again. Please tell to Mr. Anger of Newark I am quite why & news of ~~the~~ security, but I hope behind me. The the form of words he wished for.

John
John Lane & William & the children.

I was glad to get your long letter & hope you will believe to speak yourself & in the good confidence.
